As I think about this, when did we decide that the County should take the initiative – as opposed to having City council members raise the issue – and then they contact the county.

Intro sentence should say something like --- work together in these difficult fiscal times...
Don't say capital – say the required cost of insurance premiums.
It should read... remaining required cost of insurance premiums for these San Jose children for this three year period plus the full cost of insurance premiums for the following 7 years that Measure A sales tax revenues are available. Santa Clara County would also continue its $3 million appropriation to Healthy Kids.

I would leave out the reference to all kids that come forward just because I don't think we need to say this to get the deal.

Conclusion should be more friendly.
I look forward to discussing how we can collaborate on behalf of the children in our community.

Then – don't ask the Mayor to contact John Mills.
Say – if you your staff has questions, pls contact Mills.
